“Pacific in My Soul is an enlightening collection of insightful essays woven together with beautiful photographs. A wonderful addition to the library of anyone who loves nature, this book is an engaging and heartfelt celebration of the magnificent Pacific coast of North America and its marvelous wildlife.”

— Jenny E. Ross, wildlife & landscape photographer

“Through her insightful, lyrical prose, Anne Chadwick transports us to places both familiar and new with fresh details and fascinating anecdotes that bring new light to the coves, beaches, and forests of the ever-changing Pacific coast.”

— Laura Read, freelance feature writer

“Anne Chadwick is a fabulous artist who captures the very heart of the wildlife she photographs.”

— Olga Andreyev Carlisle, author of Far From Russia

Pacific In My Soul celebrates North America's spectacular West Coast, from Mexico to Alaska. This unique collection of photographs and essays offers an intimate view of an exhilarating natural world. Superb photography and stories convey personal encounters with ten endangered species, some on their way to recovery, others perhaps destined for extinction.

In a whale's-eye view of a calving lagoon, the splendor of kayaking under a full moon, and the perspective of a bald eagle looking down on a fleet of fin whales, Anne Chadwick reveals her deep sense of the intertwining of nature and spirit. Witness the birth of a harbor seal, its first swig of mother's milk, and its initial swim. Smell the spicy fragrance of a wild azalea. Hear otters using rocks to hammer open shells resting on their stomachs. Feel the magic of sunrise, as first light dances off the waves. Experience the diversity of the coast — delicate, bold, graceful, ferocious, and serene.

On this precious slice of coastline, the longer one quietly watches, the more one sees, hears, and feels. The ocean's shifting scenes, fresh smells, and salt air wash away everyday cares, as nature's rhythms quiet the static of busy lives.
